

Website Privacy Policy

Girl On Point™ is the producer and sole owner of the information collected on this site. We will not sell, share, or rent this information to others. It is our policy that no cookie, advertisement, hyperlink or other function on The Patient's Voice website is capable of passing any identifying information about any visitor to a third party unless both (a) Girl On Point™ has expressly approved such arrangement in writing and (b) the particular individual visitor has expressly, affirmatively and unambiguously granted permission for such disclosure. Girl On Point™ cannot vouch for or assume any liability for any material contained in a website to which a link is provided or for the policies and practices of that website, once a visitor leaves The Patient's Voice.

Girl On Point collects personal information, which it will not share or sell to another, under the following limited conditions:

- Discussion Boards Registration (see below)
- Contact initiated by a visitor by e-mail, either to ask questions or to submit topic ideas, comments or suggestions.
- Participation in opt-in surveys

Girl On Point™ also collects routine (non-personal or identifying) tracking information through the use of IP addresses.

Disclosure of personal information may be required by law wherein we have a good-faith belief that such action is necessary to comply with a current judicial proceeding, a court order or legal process served on our Web site.

Discussion Boards require a participant to provide a username, password, and email address. The username you provide identifies your postings to the Boards. The email address you provide is not transferred, sold, given, or otherwise disclosed to any third party. You may further elect whether or not to make your email address viewable to other users when posting new messages or replies, and you may elect whether or not to allow administrators and moderators to send you email notices regarding changes or questions relating to your postings.

Creating a username that allows personal identification or by disclosing personally identifiable information when posting messages renders information submitted public information. Such disclosure may increase the chance of receiving "spam" or unsolicited email. Girl On Point™ encourages users to use discretion when disclosing information online.

Cookies

A "persistent cookie" is a file that remains on your computer's hard drive for an extended period of time. Girl On Point™ uses persistent cookies to track aggregate user statistics on the site to help us determine how people move throughout the site, which areas are popular, and which links are unpopular or hard to see.

Advertisers or third party vendors may also set persistent cookies when links or banner ads to The Patient's Voice have been provided. We do not have access to or control over these cookies, once we have given permission for them to set cookies for advertising or tracking purposes. We may receive information regarding traffic patterns as a result of third party cookies, but again, not personally identifiable information.

You may remove persistent cookies at any time from your hard drive by clicking "tool" and then "internet options".

Log Files

We use IP addresses to analyze trends, administer the site, track user's movement, and gather broad demographic information for aggregate use. "IP addresses" are assigned by internet providers, typically a series of numbers, and are not linked to personally identifiable information.

Sharing Information

We will share aggregated demographic information with our partners and advertisers. Partners can include providers of content and services, or financial sponsors and advertisers. Shared information may include target audience size, age range and gender, time spent listening to internet radio, and/or income level and family size, but does not include any personal information that can identify any individual person.

This web site contains links to other sites. Girl On Point™ is not responsible for the privacy practices of such other sites. This privacy statement applies solely to information collected by this website.
